ALEXANDRIA COUNCIL TO INCREASE LIGHT

ittee Considering Resolution to Improve Illumination-High School Appropriations.

BLACK HAND CASES IN COURT

Alexandria, Va., Nov. E.-The illumination of the city will be increased one-third of its present capacity if a resolution of Councilman A. D. Brockett, presented at a meeting of the city council tonight, is passed. It was referred to the light committee.

The resolution provides for the installation of thirty additional are lights at various corners in the city. There are now ninety are lights in the city, and Mr. Brockett estimates that the city really needs 150 lights in order to have an are light on every corner. Insamuch as the city pays annually 815 for each are light to the Alexandria County Lighting Company, the installation of the number asked by him would mean annual outlay of E.556.

Mr. Brockett stated that he had a blue-print prepared showing where are and incandescent lights are now located in the city. In behalf of his resolution, he said the city is far behind in lighting service. The idea, he said, is to have severy other shock going west in the city have a light. Some of the streets are so dark, he asserted, that the police could be murdered without anyous seeing it.

what you want the most to do, and what you can the best Unless you can do well what you want to do, the fullness of result is impossible. Conversely, un-less you want to do what you can do well, small result is likely to

While what you want to do appears to be subordinate to what you can do, so much do I believe in the assistance of co-operation, or de-sire, that I would place "want to do" ahead of "can do."

I would advise you, first to consider what you want to do, and then to determine whether or not you can do it. If you find that what you want to do you cannot do well, then make no attempt in that direction and choose something else which you want to do, and continue until what you want to do and what you can do connect; but, in the meantime, don't loaf; want to do it.

Keep busy. Science and endeavor can more the hills, but add love to them and you can move mountains.

More than half of the failures are those who don't love their work, but make drudgery of it; who do it because they have to, or because they think they have to. They then become automatic machines, combinations of springs, wheels, and levers, assimilated and controlled, not by the head of desire, but by the spinal marrow of necessity.

I would not clip one chip from the monument of faithfulness. I would not remove a miscroscopic fraction from the worth of persistency; but I would say that mere faithfulness by itself, and mere persistency by itself, or the two together, will produce only ordinary result; while, if love, ambition, and desire be added to them, no one can foressee the length, breadth, and foresee the length, breadth, and depth of the result.

Keep steadily at your work, no matter how menial or disagreeable it may be, until something better crosses your path, presentation of the preliminary testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission in their application to increase freight rates 5 per cent.

It also developed that anthractic coal thusiasm of your energy. Keep continually at it, whether you be a bootblack, or occupy the highest position. Throw all your faithfulners, all your peraistency, and all the energy, and all the energy, and all the energy, and all the good there is in you into this work, realizing that, without fundamental faithfulness and basic persistency, love will have no ground to grow upon.

But add love and desire to these fundamental or basic things, and then even the dry earth will bring forth a harvest, and hard things will be softened.

Without love there is no sunshine, and all work is drufgery.
